ELECTION AND LAW TEST NEXT IN OKLAHOMA

Injunction and Poll Both Asked For.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Unless Gov. Walton decides that an election cannot be held under martial law, the people of Oklahoma will vote next Tuesday in special election on whether the legislature may assemble without call of the governor.

On the same day arguments will be heard before Judge J. I. Phelps in the District court on the petition for injunction filed today by sixty-seven legislators against the adjutant general, B. H. Markham.

The special election is made possible by the decision of the Supreme court today reversing the lower court which had forbidden the election.

Walton May Face Crisis.

Gov. Walton refused tonight to submit to any questioning concerning his attitude toward the Supreme court decision and the special election.

It is plain that he regards this as a crisis in his career.

The state clerk of elections has not yet issued the call and it is understood that the governor's attorney will make an effort to block the referendum by an injunction for a suspending which would at least result in delay.

The question of the Oct. 2 election was further complicated tonight by a request for a restraining injunction in the initiative measure suit, uncertainty as to the action of Attorney General short tomorrow in waiving or refusing to waive his fifteen days' right to a reply, and the physical question of getting out the ballots in time. It seems about an even chance that the election will be knocked out.

May Provide Vindication.

Should the election measure carry, it would be an invitation from the people to have their representatives impeach the governor. He could hardly ignore that mandate. If the measure fails, it will be a victory for his policy, his Klan issue, and his martial law order.

He should be given a bonus and several other incentive measures will also be voted upon.

Sends Troops to New County.

The governor announced that he had extended absolute martial law to Murray county, the seat of which is Sulphur, a city of 6,000. Troops had been sent there tonight, he said, following request of citizens who declare that life and property were not safe there under Klan rule, that men had been mugged and their homes burned, and the courts would not move.

The petition of the sixty-seven "no" legislators was filed in the District court late this afternoon. The legislature then left for home. They will reassemble on call of James E. Bresnan pro tem., it was agreed today.

Sheriff Wants Job Back.

Sheriff Sanford of Tulsa county today filed a formal petition with the state Supreme court asking for an order requiring the National Guard from his office. Arguments on the petition will be heard next week.

Gov. Walton advises firmly to the legislature that the legislature adjourned and has no power to call itself into session.

The only way for the people of Oklahoma to get a new governor, Gov. Walton said, was to elect a legislature next summer that would vote against him.

"And they can't do that," he said. "They know that the majority of the people in this state are with me in the cause of the people and the sensible government. They are doing and are trying their best to keep me from uncovering the evidence of their murderous work in this state."

"Not a Religious Fight."

It is not a religious fight, I know, but they have whipped Protestantism. It is not racial. It is a combative and political fight. They whip everyone. All that is necessary is a member to stand with the whip and then give them the tail of an enemy and say he has got out with a girl or something without any evidence they will hit him and drive him from town, will maintain martial law until I have a chance to investigate conditions and clean up such organizations as the opposition is relaxed.

I think that my newspaper one will do. I would not want the support of some of them. Their only is an asset. All the opposition is a city commissioner and stopped deals by which the ring was stealing money from the city, they have after me. They have never let me know they would use the Klan or any other to get me."

'HUSBAND' A GIRL, 'BRIDE' DISCOVERS

Then Police Learn "He" Has Legal Spouse.

A strange case of dual personality came to light yesterday when Barbara Gaynor, 22 year old factory girl, learned that her "husband" was a woman two years younger than she.

As a result of her disclosure to the West Chicago police, detectives began watching last night for Barbara's recent "spouse." Meanwhile, earlier in the day, they arrested Alexander Mosinski, the bona-fide husband of Barbara's "husband," taking him into custody on general principles.

Masqueraded as Man.

The real name of Barbara's "man" was given by the police as Sophie Dziedzinski. When the young factory girl met Sophie at the Academy the other more than a year ago, she said she was Leo Dziedzinski. She wore trousers, her hair was cut short and trimmed in back, and she had a talking way about her. Immediately Barbara began to feel flutterings about the heart.

"I fell in love with Leo," she told the police, simply. "We went together for a time, and then we began to get a home ready for our married life. Last June I bought about $200 worth of furniture on the installment plan and we put it in a little flat at 1544 Emma street. Yes, sir, I paid for everything."

They made the romantic trip to the marriage license clerk on Aug. 15. Judge Harry W. McSweeney performed the ceremony.

"Husband's" Husband a Guest.

"Then we had a wedding party at our house on Emma street," said the bride. "Among the guests was this Alexander Mosinski, who I learned, I had met, at 214 West 18th street. He seemed to enjoy himself a lot."

In fact, Kosinski became such a steady visitor that Barbara nine days ago moved with her "husband" to 1098 North Marshall avenue.

Last Sunday came the discovery that Leo was a woman, whereupon the "husband" fled to Milwaukee.

The hideous factory girl received a letter yesterday from Milwaukee saying Sophie was coming to Chicago Thursday night.

A detective was dispatched to Milwaukee, while other detectives watched the railway terminals here. They took Kosinski, Sophie's real husband, into custody pending her arrest.

40 CENT JUMP IN COAL PRICE, ECHO OF STRIKE

The first increase in retail coal prices since the strike was announced yesterday by M. E. Kelt, vice president of the Consumers' company. Anthracite range coal will sell for $17.40 a ton, an increase of 40 cents, while anthracite chestnut coal was raised 20 cents to $17.30 a ton. No increase was made in price of bituminous coal or of the other anthracite grades. It is understood other coal dealers will follow the consumer company's example.

MAYER $500,000 TO LAW SCHOOL

Report Widow Plans Big

Memorial at N. U.

A gift of half a million dollars to the law school of Northwestern University by Mrs. Rachel Mayer, widow of Dr. Mayer, as a foundation in memory of her husband is expected, it is understood, by the trustees of the university within the next few days.

The major portion of the gift, if not all, it is reported, will be devoted to erecting the proposed new building to the law school on the Alexander McKinlock memorial campus stretching along Chicago avenue to the lake front.

Details of the manner in which the fund shall be transferred to the university from the Mayer estate, and of the purpose to which it is to be devoted, have not been disclosed by Mrs. Mayer at recent conference with the university trustees, and it is said, have not as yet been completed.

Widow Plans Memorial.

Mr. Mayer, who died on Aug. 14, 1922, leaving an estate of more than $50,000, made no provision in his will for a bequest to the university, but gave Mrs. Mayer and the other trustees of the estate wide latitude in the disposition of it or any part of it.

Mr. Mayer, who inherited one-half of the estate in trust, is said to have been seeking a suitable medium through which to bestow a lasting gift in his husband's memory, and decided upon the law school as a new law school.

"This matter has taken a new angle. The press is on my shoulders now. They want you to make a statement. Will you talk to the reporter?"

"I knew there was something in the wind," he exclaimed nervously.

Consults with Attorney.

When informed of the size of the plan relative to his wife's death he seemed inclined to discuss the case freely. But before doing so, he declared he would have to communicate with his lawyer and cousin, Howard Thomas Kingsbury of Conduit Bros. He telephoned to Mr. Kingsbury in the reporter's presence, saying:

"This matter has taken a new angle. The press is on my shoulders now. They want you to make a statement. Will you talk to the reporter?"

"I'd like to tell all I know about my wife's death, but I must abide by my lawyer's instructions. I've had a terrible life."

The funeral at the German town house Saturday is to be followed by services at Central Laurel Hills cemetery in Philadelphia. William T. Hunter, an uncle of Mrs. Webb, and Mrs. Hunter, who was the mother of the deceased, will be in the funeral.

Friends Announced.

It is understood the funeral is to be held on Saturday at 1 p.m. at the German town house.

Plans for McKinley's funeral already include provision for a formal service at the cemetery. Elmer H. Gary, Illinois attorney, who was one of the foremost corporation lawyers of the country, will conduct the services.

Friends Announced.

Tells of Sleuthing at Up in Clouds Club.

By GENEVIEVE FORBES.

A policeman recently detailed on vice, using his brand new "vernacular test" in sleuthing out the character of the girls at the Up in the Clouds club dances, he testified yesterday at a hearing before Master in Chancery Ninian H. Welch. The hearing is over the petition of Harry W. Standridge, president of the club, to restrain the owners of the City Hall Square building from forcing the organization out of quarters on the twenty-first floor.

All the girls, "good lookin' and bad" told the policeman to "shut up" he admitted. So he says he knew the place was all right.

Here's a Different Story.

But a Moody Bible Institute student, an elevator starter for the City Hall Square building, affidavit on the scene, he told Mr. Welch last night, saw girls dancing, "but not in their feet." A tall girl wrapped her arms around her escort's neck, draped her head on his shoulder, and tried by signs to "engage other dances with the men on the side lines," he said.

"And when the music stopped," the elevator man recalled, "she took a ticket from the man and stuck it into her stocking. Sure, it was rolled down."

Attorney James F. Bishop and A. A. Worley, counsel for Standridge, claim all the clouds in the "Up in the Clouds" have a silver lining of respectability. Frank Bunting of Mayor, and Peter J. Flaherty, representing City Hall Square company, maintain it's very cloudy up there on the twenty-first floor ballroom.

Great Test Is Applied.

And so the policeman and the elevator starter told their stories.

"That place's as fine a dance hall as in the city of Chicago," declared Anthony Carroll, patrolman on the best, "It's not a bad girl there, and I should know."

Carroll had just finished a nine month's detail on vice.

"And so when I went up to the club," he explained, "I looked around, but I didn't recognize a face. I wondered if maybe there were some new girls, so I put all the girls in the place to my test. The test, he said, was to question vis-a-vis in the vernacular of the underworld.

"And what did they do?"

"In every case they told me to 'put up.' That showed they were all right."

Louis Panser, the elevator man, gave a demonstration of the way he and some of the girls danced.

Clara Wagner of 1328 West 13th street denied she had ever been any place but the International Miss Wagner won first prize last Friday night by dancing fifty-seven times during the evening. For this variety of performance she received fifteen dimes, and split fifty-five with Mr. Standridge, president of the club, she said.

Others supported her denial.

SALOON OWNERS SUE TO REGAIN LOST LICENSES

Call Dever's Revocation of Permits Illegal.

Four saloonkeepers petitioned Chief Justice Philip L. Sullivan of the Circuit court yesterday to compel Mayor Dever to restore their saloon licenses. A fifth asked that the mayor be enjoined from revoking his license.

These are the first batch of the expected appeals to the courts seeking redress from Mayor Dever's action, which is termed illegal by Attorney Jay J. McCarthy for the saloonkeepers. It is contended that the mayor is usurping power and depriving beverage license holders of their rights without due process of law. It is Mayor Dever's announced policy, and he has been adhering to it, that licenses are to be revoked when police find whisky or beer on sale on the premises.

Demand Court Action.

The saloon men contend that this is unjust and illegal, as, they say, the unsupported word of a policeman should not be taken, that a conviction in court alone would authorize the mayor to close up their places of business. The present crusade amounts to confiscation of property without a trial, Attorney McCarthy charges, inasmuch as the mayor will not issue licenses to other persons who wish to reopen the cinct places.

The four saloon proprietors seeking to check the mayor are: Alfred Carroll, 1333 Sedgwick street; Sam Popa, 1882 Clybourn avenue; Joseph Just, 3827 Lincoln avenue; and Agnes Sherman, 3142 Greenview avenue.

More Licenses Go.

There was no abatement of the drive in the mayor's office, however, thirty-four more licenses falling victim to the cinct places.

COL. MCCORMICK ADDRESSES NEW MEDILL CLASSES

"Open House" Launches N. U. Courses.

news were undependable, untrustworthy?

"I'll tell you how it would be. It would be disfavor as to the small things and disgust and distrust as to the large. Jay Gould tried the evil way. He bought a New York newspaper to serve his own ends. He reduced it to a nonentity."

Now Try "Influence."

As to specific attempts by business interests to influence the newspaper he helps run, the colonel said this: "In my time on our paper there has never been an effort to influence its action or expression except by some enterprise made out of sudden success. In my case, what possible benefit could there be to an advertiser from any oblique conduct of the newspaper he is patronizing? He would only be interfering with, and finally destroying, the value of the medium through which he is speaking to the public."

He said that when he had finished scanning in a New York newspaper four columns of "among those present" at one of Commodore Vanderbilt's parties. In the list was the name of every New York editor and his wife.

So Father Joseph, sending a long letter, went to New York and so thoroughly sifted the want with his son, New York World that that journal continues gallantly to function, although Joseph Pulitzer has been a decade in his grave.

That was one of the stories Robert R. McCormick, co-editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, told faculty and students of Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University, just returning at the school's annual "open house" when they call the party which launches each new school year.

Editor Should Be Free.

For his Pulitzer story Col. McCormick claimed a moral. It is important, yes, important, he thinks, that editors of honest newspapers be not bound by the "chains of politics and faction" and equally important that they be not tied and cluttered by the pink ribbon of the world of fashion, or "society" as the phrase goes.

He told another story, for which he claimed no moral—of a political nature. That was, he said, on Tom Tammie, several years ago a third or fourth assistant to the city editor—He was by origin and one of those never-say-never-lads. Cardinal Gibbons came to town. That prelate had no passion for interviewers. But the seal of his assistant got the cardinal's secretarial buffer on the telephone, he was promised, pleased, they rejoiced in these words: "Now, Father, Tom Tammie will do this interview right—absolutely right. Why, we're going to send Floyd Gibbons over there—the cardinal's son!"

The colonel's subject was "The Newspaper for Ideas Versus the Newspaper for Profit," and here are two of the fundamentals of his talk:

The honest thing in government is the honest thing in journalism. Honesty in news presentation and in editorial expression not only coincides with a newspaper's financial success, but is indispensable to it.

The Need for Honesty.

About that, honesty, business the speaker came out strong, saying:

"The old idea that newspaper publishing means losing virtue or the old homestead is stuff out of melodrama. It survives only in the minds of super-crook Chicago politicians. They think the success of a newspaper is in inverse ratio to its honesty. It's an absurd delusion. If only the readers that utterances and acts of a newspaper are checked up by more people than are the utterances of any other institution."

The speaker thumped the table when he said that. Then he put these questions:

"How would it be if a newspaper printed cooking recipes that wouldn't jell?"

"How would it be if it printed patterns that wouldn't cut into cloth?"

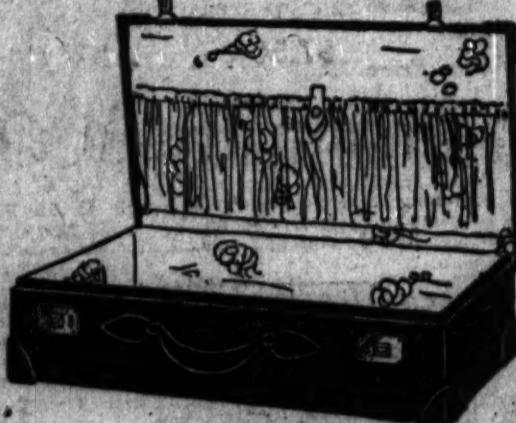

"How would it be if its financial

PIPE OF PEACE NEARLY OUT AT PALEFACE FEAST

Three score Indians from seven tribes sat down at a love feast in the Tiger room of the Hotel Sherman last night as guests of the Chicago Friends of the American Indian—and two policemen stood behind the curtains of an anteroom.

Through the banquet Edward F. Dodge, executive secretary of the Friends of the American Indian, walked slowly between the tables, nervously glancing at the curiosities.

Police received the first invitation to join in the Indian festivities yesterday afternoon. There was the usual aperitif for the waiters at the Chicago Historical society room. The affair, it seems, was rather exclusive to members of the Friends of the American Indian, and when "Capt." R. D.

Parker, chief of the Indian Fellowship League, walked in, he was greeted with coolness.

And when Capt. Parker took the floor for a talk with the braves, the hosts grew colder.

"Braves, you know me. Most of you are members of my organization. We ought to stand together. These other people have got us here under false pretenses. Have you got your railroad fare? Get it quick, or maybe you won't. Be men."

Reported to Sidewalk.

This is said to have been the substance of his council speech. For it was ended before he finished the introduction. The policemen saw to that. Capt. Parker was escorted to the sidewalk.

But the true friend of the Indian, it seems, never gives up in the face of difficulty. For last night, when Henry P. Barnes made the address of welcome at the banquet, Capt. Parker was there.

Sloan, president of the Society of American Indians, of third organization, and four braves sat at a table in the center of the room. The dinner was an invitational affair. And Capt. Parker wasn't on the invitation list. But he was there.

"You bet I'm here," he said. "Why?

The Indians were peaceful. But two policemen stood behind the curtains of the door to see that their white hosts were peaceful, too.

I've put on more Indian shows than anybody in this country. I know thousands of Indians by their tribal name. One word and these braves would walk right out of this room with me."

Proves on Celebration.

Dodge kept glancing at the curtain. Meanwhile William Mattison, secretary of the Society of American Indians, was in his room up in the hotel drawing up resolutions calling upon all friends of the Indian to turn upon Indian day celebrations. He said he was hitting at the three day affair to be held in Deer Grove park of the forest preserve. The latter opened today.

"Another case of optics," said Dodge.

"They wanted to come in with us and when we would let them in we are backed by the Association of Commerce, the Union League club, and the county commissioners—they held a rump convention of their own."

And while the Indians completed the seven course love feast the three organizations, The Friend of the American Indian, the Indian Welfare society, and the Society of American Indians, waged their verbal war.

The Indians were peaceful. But two policemen stood behind the curtains of the door to see that their white hosts were peaceful, too.

STOKES' "PAYOFF MAN" IS FUGITIVE, STATE CHARGES

New Affidavit Is Branded Fake by Woman.

JOSEPH BRUNNER, named by many as the "pay-off man" who gathered affidavits which are believed to damage the character of Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, has fled from Chicago. His flight is in the face of the state's investigation to determine whether attempts to prove Mrs. Stokes an abuser of Chicago underworld reports comprised a conspiracy on the part of her millionaire husband, W. E. D.

Brunner has been sought for ten days, a general police order having been issued for his arrest, but last night Charles Wharton, assistant state attorney, learned positively that the alleged "pay-off man" had left the city.

Brunner New Fake Affidavit.

Telling of two witnesses before the grand jury during the day to question them under oath after they had refused to talk in informal cross examination, revealed another bogus affidavit attempting to place the scariet brand on Mrs. Stokes. It also shed light on the operations of Stokes' lawyer, Richard Westbrook, a Negro who was discharged from the state's attorney's office.

Miller Phillips, a Negro woman who signed a statement that she saw Mrs. Stokes drunk in New York and later her coming out of Edgar T. Walmsley's apartment there, told the grand jury that Westbrook had her sign the statement and that when she affixed her signature she thought the paper dealt with the eviction of some tenants.

Schoolmate Aids Wife.

A childhood playmate of Mrs. Stokes during the day braved publicity and official questioning to come to her rescue. Mrs. Edward Schlesin of 905 University parkway, wife of a civil engineer, voluntarily informed the officials of her associations with Mrs. Stokes when she was Helen Elwood of Denver. She said Mrs. Stokes couldn't have been in Chicago at the time alleged in affidavits.

LAW OR NO LAW, BIRDS WILL FLY, CONSTABLE FINDS

At 5:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon

Constable George Harrison's whistle gave out on him and he had to retire from canary chasing until morning.

The constable was sent after the songsters by Justice John F. Boyer of Evanston, who issued a writ of replevin in behalf of Henry Clopp, owner of a bird store in Miles Center. Two weeks ago Clopp sold 350 canaries to John Wungle of Morton Grove, and it was the latter's failure to make payments which brought Clopp into court.

Constable Harrison journeyed to Morton Grove in a flurvy. He read the writ of replevin to the imprisoned canaries, then loaded the little car with cages and started back to town.

Bird melodies assailed his ears as he bumped along the road. Songs came from all about him, making his tympanums tickle.

"Ain't nature wonderful?" said the constable, "to imitate peanut whistles so closely?"

Then the flurvy struck a stone. The damaged open cage boxes fell to the road. The canaries flew all over.

Harrison, being of conscientious constable, got out the writ of replevin and read it in a firm voice to the birds.

Then he threatened them with contempt of court. Then he pleaded with them.

"Finally, I tried talking in their own language," he related to the constable. "I whispered to them, but they wouldn't pay any attention."

Unless he retrieves the birds, Harrison will have to pay for them. He spent the night studying up on canaries. This morning he will climb some of the nearby trees, with a salt cellar in each hip pocket, and attempt to trap them according to the ancient formula.

Henry Taitlow, 1000 N. Dearborn at 705 North Clark street, was fined $100 and costs yesterday by Judge John E. Prindiville in Chicago avenue court on charges of operating a gambling machine.

When questioned why he did not ascertain the names of the couple to whom he gave the baby or where they lived, Viemminck explained that he was "so anxious to get the child off his hands" that he didn't think to ask.

"I was worried to death nearly."

He said, "for fear my two sons would learn of Eva's baby and her disgrace."

BABIES MIXED IN HOSPITAL; 1 GONE; FEAR FOUL PLAY

Quiz Man Who Took Infant and Gave It Away.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 27.—The police are today combing the city in an endeavor to determine whether or not a missing 3 weeks old baby of Mrs. William Greatrex, given in mistake to the wrong people by a hospital nurse, is still alive. A mysterious man and woman, "to whom the indications are said to have given the child, are also sought.

Under arrest are Alfonso Viemminck, 51, held on a fugitive charge; and his daughter, Miss Eva Viemminck, detained as a material witness.

Viemminck stated that after he gave the baby to the much sought couple they changed the infant's clothes in the automobile they had waiting at the hospital.

Find Baby's Clothes.

In a search of the Viemminck home today the police found the hospital clothes that the child wore when it was handed over to Viemminck by the nurse.

On Sept. 6 Mrs. William Greatrex gave birth at the Evangelical Deaconess hospital to a healthy baby boy.

On Sept. 17 Mrs. Greatrex died. Her husband took the body back to Toronto for interment, saying he would call later for his child.

A few days after Miss Viemminck gave birth to her child she was discharged from the hospital. She left stating she would come for her baby in a few days.

Wanted to Get Rid of Child.

When questioned why he did not ascertain the names of the couple to whom he gave the baby or where they lived, Viemminck explained that he was "so anxious to get the child off his hands" that he didn't think to ask.

"I was worried to death nearly."

He said, "for fear my two sons would learn of Eva's baby and her disgrace."

"I met the couple at the hospital and called for Eva's baby and gave it in the auto and then left at once for the depot on their way to their home somewhere in Pennsylvania."

The story came out when William Greatrex Sr., father-in-law of the dead mother, came back from Canada and called at the hospital for his daughter-in-law's baby.

The nurse overheard a doctor telephoning that there was a baby to go home. That means that a family would call for a child. She knew that the Greatrex family would surely be called for, and when told this was a man at the door inquiring for his baby she assumed that it was Mr. Greatrex and picked up the Greatrex child and gave it to him without question.

KERMANS

Pricings are never high

We have repeatedly told you that prices at KERMANS are never high. Here is proof of it:

The coats illustrated were drawn from two of many unusual values we are showing. The one on the right is of beautiful brown Marvella cloth, with wide sweeping collar, cuffs and bottom of Viatka squirrel. Its price is $140.

The coat on the left is black Marvella, with big and luxurious collar and cuffs of mink-dyed squirrel. Its price is also $140.

Both of these are beautiful-fitting coats—giving one the long, slender lines so desired. They are new and absolutely correct.

We feel certain that nowhere in Chicago—except at KERMANS—can you find coats as fine as these, for such a small price.

And these are only two of many items which prove that KERMANS prices are never high.

BIDS ORDERED FOR BUILDING OF McCORMICK ROAD

Sanitary Board to Lay 54
Foot Concrete Way.

Work on the McCormick road, which, in connection with improvements on Devon and Kimball avenues contemplated by the city plan commission would connect all northwest territory with the west park boulevard system, will get under way this fall. This is the second year of work.

WILLIE G. NANCE,
CHICAGO Photo.
The sanitary district trustees formally announced plans for the project and authorized advertising for bids.

The McCormick road will be of concrete, fifty-four feet wide. It will extend four and one-half miles from Devon avenue, Chicago, to West Park road avenue, Evanston, along the right of way of the north ship channel. The road was started in 1919, but high construction costs caused it to be postponed until last April, when Trustee Willie G. Nance resurrected it.

The naming of the proposed highway was in tribute to Col. R. R. McCormick, coeditor of THE TRIBUNE, who was president of the sanitary board during construction of the north channel.

Advantages of the Road.

The original proposal was for a roadway extending from Lawrence avenue, Chicago, to Sheridan road in Wilmette. But, even as modified, the trustees point out, the completed highway not only will relieve traffic on existing thoroughfares—such as Sheridan and Devon through Evanston—but will greatly enhance value of dock property owned by the sanitary district.

Subway Under Tracks.

The sanitary district proposes to construct the new highway 20 per cent heavier than required by Cook county and state specifications. Ornamental, concrete, high standards will line the new road, which, it is expected, will be finished by Oct. 1, 1925.

There will be a subway under the Chicago and Northwestern railway tracks at Oakland avenue. There will be no grade crossings. Cross roads will be at intervals of one-half mile.

PROPOSE JOINT CONFERENCE ON LAKE LEVEL ROW

Chicago's hopes for overcoming Canadian objections to the present diversion of lake waters through the drainage canal here center in a future joint conference of engineers representing the sanitary district and the hydro-electric power commission of Ontario.

This was indicated in a report submitted yesterday at meeting of the board. The report detailed results of two recent trips GEORGE M. WISNER, trustee and engineer, made to Canada in an effort to iron out differences with dominion authorities.

Tom subcommittee has found that many people of Canada, as well as the United States, either from ignorance of the subject or for the purpose of advancing some private interests, are given to making unfair statements as to the manner in which the diversion at Chicago was created, as well as the purpose of the diversion.

While Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the Ontario commission, apparently prejudiced the case of the sanitary district, he accepted a proposal of George M. Wisner, one of our consulting engineers, that the questions relating to the effect of the remedial works proposed by the sanitary district upon the hydro-electric power production at the Niagara falls and in the St. Lawrence river should be left to engineering experts representing the two bodies to investigate thoroughly and then report.

Adam Beck is leading the opposition in Canada. In this country Attorney General Herman L. Eckers of Wisconsin is directing another attack, with support from Cleveland. It is contended the diversion impairs navigation and power possibilities. Chicago's argument is that the health of 2,000,000 persons in the sanitary district depends upon the sewage disposal facilities now provided and that regulating works it would construct would restore lake levels.

Although there is no present Federal court decision going against the sanitary district, the question of the latter's right to take more than the 4,147 cubic feet per second allowed by a war department order still is in the courts. On its side, the district claims a treaty of 1909-10 between the two governments permits diversion of 10,000 cubic feet at Chicago on condition that Canada be permitted to divert at the Niagara falls 15,000 cubic feet per second more than that allowed the United States.

OREGON DRIVES RED RULERS OUT OF GOVERNMENT

Labor Dictator Marones and His Crowd Jobless.

TONS OUT REDS

CHICAGO TRIBUNE Foreign News Service
MEXICO CITY, Sept. 27.—President Alvaro Obregon last night and today put what appears to be an silent eclipse on bolshevism in Mexico. A few weeks ago alien bolshewists, headed by the Roumanian, Robert Hoberman, who had insinuated themselves into offices in the Mexican government, were ousted from the ministry of education which the Reds were using for propaganda work against the United States. It was learned today, however, that conservative members of the cabinet, including Gen. Alvaro Obregon, head of the Mexican Federation of Labor and recognized native high chief of communism in Mexico. Gen. Marones has been removed from his government position as first chief of military factories, warehouses, and supplies, the most lucrative job in Mexico and where he had accumulated a large fortune.

Rest of Reds Out.

With Marones the whole machinery of communism in the government seems to have fallen. It is learned that the following other leading communists officials have resigned:

Ricardo Trevino, chief of the department of industry in the ministry of industry, commerce, and labor.

Manuel Cárdenas, chief of the department of labor in the ministry of industry, commerce, and labor.

Manuel Moneda, director of the stamp printing bureau.

Emmanuel Salcedo, director of the government printing office.

Manuel O. Yudico, chief of the government garages.

The TRIBUNE learns that the cleanup will be extended to the state governments, where radical officials have much concern and embarrassment to the central government.

Bombshell Among Reds.

The news has fallen like a bombshell in the Mexican radicals.

Gen. Obregon's elimination of Marones was as unexpected as it was startling.

It is not yet clear just how far his side forces a readjustment of Mexican politics, especially in view of the pending national campaign for the presidency. It was generally believed that the radicals were holding their nose through the influence of Gen. Plutarco Calles, former secretary of government, who resigned to enter the race for the presidency as the reputed government candidate; under the Mexican constitution Gen. Obregon or any other president cannot succeed himself.

Gen. Calles has refused to assist the other radicals. It is believed that due to his experience with various strains of communism in Mexico, Gen. Calles has decided to ally himself with the radicals.

You can buy a suit of clothes at $25.00 and probably get good value for the money or you can go to a Good Custom Tailor and pay from $140 to $175....and the tailor makes only a fair profit at that between Gen. Obregon's big cleanup and the recent resignation of Adolfo de la Huerta as secretary of the treasury is not yet clear. Señor de la Huerta has been listed as a mild radical, but the business men of Mexico have considerable confidence in him.

Marones Most Dangerous.

Señor Marones has been considered the most dangerous man in Mexico, politically as well as otherwise. He has made sinister threats against newspaper men who have tried to disclose the Red system in the republic. He has risen from poverty to sudden wealth, wearing with diamond adornments and openly paraded in the chamber of deputies before the "biggest grafters" in the Mexican republic. He has been called "Midnight" Marones because he refused to see members of supplies to the Mexican government until after 11 p.m. alone in his office.

The establishments under Marones' direction included the national factory of arms, the national cartridge factory, the national artillery and ammunition factory, the national powder factory, the national factory of uniforms and general supplies, the national artillery foundry, the national tanning works, the national leather working factory, the national factory of military hospital supplies, the national laboratories and chemical works and the national garage.

Large Sum of Money.

The government has spent large sums on these factories. About 50,000 men and women appear on the pay rolls. Señor Marones hired Germans only as his experts and inspectors of materials. He handled all the finances. Señor Marones is a member of the chamber of deputies, and was drawing a salary from the legislative branch and a salary from the executive branch of the government contrary to law. He has been attacked for this in the chamber of deputies without avail up to this time. He has been an active politician, taking part in campaigns throughout the country, organizing precincts, wards and districts, and controlling the election machinery.

Señor Marones instructed all his employees in radical communism. He has said that his chief aim is to give employment to as many workers as possible regardless of the cost of production. An American salesman recently tried to talk economy when making a sale to the national factories.

"I don't care about the cost," Señor Marones is reported to have replied. "All I want is material so that my people can work."

Señor Marones is 30 years old and single, an energetic disciple of free love.

ITALIANS LEAVE CORFU, BUT SAIL RIGHT BACK AGAIN

Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.
[Cablegram: 1923. By New York Times.]
NAPLES, Sept. 27.—[Tribune Radio.]—The Italians evacuated Corfu in accordance with the program of ceremonies outlined by the international telegram to the Greek government. The Italian squadron returned to the harbor of Corfu after the full formalization had been completed.

A telegram added that Premier Explains Fleet's Return.

The return of the Italian ships today after the ceremony of evacuation was attributed to the fact that the population of Corfu was disturbed and excited, the people throughout the morning. The streets were draped with Greek and British flags, the population chiefly thanking Great Britain for their release from Italian occupation.

Unfairness in assessing property in Winnetka, Kenilworth, Wilmette, and Glenoak was charged before the board of review yesterday when 200 taxpayers demanded reductions. They declared that the board, in their suburb, was known as a "board of reduction" for the wealthy.

Arguments followed between the taxpayers and twelve officials of the town, headed by Attorney Hubert W. Butler, who spoke as representatives of the "New Trier taxing bodies," to object to reductions of real and personal property assessments.

Edward R. Litsinger of the board of review asked Peaster whether he could prove that estates valued at $5,000 should have been assessed at a higher valuation. Peaster said he would present proof today.

Reduced—Also Raised.

Mr. Peaster waved a hat and said, "Here is the document. You can see for yourself that he is down for $250."

That's a lie!" shouted Mr. Butler.

Edward R. Litsinger of the board of review asked Peaster whether he could prove that estates valued at $5,000 should have been assessed at a higher valuation. Peaster said he would present proof today.

Reduced—Also Raised.

Mr. Peaster told the complaining taxpayers that real estate experts had prepared valuations on all property in the north shore towns, and that the assessors had reduced their figures 15 per cent. Later it was learned that 4,000 workmen were involved.

SINGER SCORNS
ARTIST'S IDEA OF HER LOOKS

(Picture on back page.)

Miss June Warwick, a concert singer, objects to being made the subject of the modernist art, according to a bill filed before Judge Irvin D. Rymer yesterday. She asks that Rudolph Weissenborn, an artist, be restrained from presenting at the No Jury Society of Artists' exhibition on Oct. 1 his portrait of her, which she declared "not only is not her likeness but has elements of abandon which would bring her into ridicule, levity, and ill repute."

Miss Warwick also protests against the "subistic" portrait being displayed on the cover of an advertising program for the No Jury Artists' Customic gallery to be held at the Trianon ballroom on Oct. 1. Her bill, filed by Attorney Philip R. Davis, says the program is "entirely reprehensible," and would cause her to lose "caste, prestige, and reputation in her chosen profession." Weissenborn, at his studio at 1801 North LaSalle street, has tentatively himself with the remark: "Evidently Miss Warwick doesn't understand modern art." The master will be up today before Judge Rymer.

March of Springfield was elected

SUSPECT POISON IN DEATH OF N. Y. SOCIETY WOMAN

to learn the immediate cause of Mrs. Webb's death.

This much, however, can be told: The Webb, who spent much time in fashionable hotels in Westchester county and in Greenwich, Conn., came to the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club about a month ago. Not being members themselves, they bore a card of introduction from some one who was. They engaged an expensive suite and lived quietly and mostly to themselves.

Dying Before Doctor Is Called.

About a week after they came to the club Mrs. Webb became ill. Dr. Meyer was summoned. After his first examination he called to his aid two learned nurses, and thereafter the patient was in the hands of Dr. Meyer. Although Dr. Meyer treated Mrs. Webb for three weeks before she succumbed, it is known to have told an official of Westchester county that "she was dying when I was called in."

It was also revealed reluctantly by one familiar with the development of the mystery thus far that the expert summoned from New York so far agreed with Mrs. Webb as to the advance of determination of the contents of the viscera that they were dealing with a suspicious case. The only scintilla of information given to right to explain their willingness to commit themselves even tentatively was that they found bruises on Mrs. Webb's abdomen.

Insists on Investigation.

When Mrs. Webb died late on Tuesday night, Dr. Meyer sought out Corcoran Fitzgerald. It was obvious to the coroner that his caller, who did not arrive until after midnight, was about to stir some excitement. The coroner, in turn, dictating to involve persons of wealth and standing in a scandal unless there was genuine reason, suggested to Dr. Meyer that he review all the circumstances in the case and return later in the morning.

Dr. Meyer, however, refused to yield. He had decided to accept the coroner's suggestion and finally he asserted that Mr. and Mrs. Hunter would join in the declaration that there was reason to investigate their niece's death.

Member of Old and Wealthy Family.

Mrs. Webb was of the fourth generation that has occupied the family home in Madison avenue. Her grandfather, the late Edmund A. S. Smith, was a financier and left large holdings of real estate that are still held by the family. On his father's side she descends from the Jennings and Price families of Philadelphia, Conn.

Mr. Webb's father, the late Charles Henry Webb, "John Paul," was known as an author or journalist. For three years he was literary editor of the New York Times under Henry J. Raymond and was also affiliated with the New York Tribune under Horace Greeley and with the New York Herald. He was the founder of the California, which was the first literary journal of

DENEEN GOES OUT FOR INDEPENDENT

BY PARKE BROWN.

Practical political sagacity of ex-tion of Nov. 6 by the formal entry

One of the chief attacks on the anti-coalition movement up to this time has been that the men leading it were

"reformers" rather than "practicals" and that their inexperience would be a real handicap if there should be a real battle with the bosses. The entry of seasoned Deneen campaigners into previous combination.

At a noon meeting of the Better

Austin, the Rev. William A. Benson,

George W. Dixon, and Charles S. Peterson, was given a free hand to go ahead in formulating an independent ticket in connection with other organizations. Chairman Bangs said a conference would be called as soon as the Deneen subcommittee is chosen.

It is planned to circulate nominating petitions for independents as soon as possible without waiting for the outcome of the Republican and Democratic county conventions, as by that time it would be almost too late to obtain the 17,000 necessary signatures.

LOODS WIPE OUT REFUGEE HOMES IN TOKIO RUINS

BY RODERICK MATHESON.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

(Copyright 1923, By The Chicago Tribune.)

OSAKA, Sept. 28.—Two-thirds of the Honjo and Fukagawa districts in Tokio, the poorest section, wherein not a house remains, was visited by a government investigation, forcing the refugees to abandon their temporary abodes and seek high ground. In some places the water is four or five feet deep.

In suburbs along the river the flood washed out refugee shacks and destroyed 2,000 of 2,300 shacks erected by the government. The torrential rain was accompanied by a heavy wind, resulting in much suffering.

Damaged Rail Lines.

The typhoon weather has heavily damaged several railway lines, including the Hakone tunnel and the main line, while temporary bridges have been washed out. The majority of the lines through the devastated area are again out of commission. Relief workers rushing food have been cut off.

It has been decided to pay out the 10,000,000 yen ($5,000,000) donated by the emperor in cash to destitute refugees.

Lieut. Amakasu, court martialled for the murder of Sakae Ouchi, Japan's last anarchist, who had been under arrest, was found guilty today. Sentence was not pronounced. The court extenuates its decision, saying in part:

"The motive is recognized as based upon a desire to remove Onogi and other anarchist leaders, who were believed especially dangerous in the state at the time of the great calamity."

Contributions to Tribune Fund for the relief of the survivors of the Japanese earthquake amount to $20,428.25. Contributions yesterday totaled $9,225, as follows:

Employes of the Liberty Trust and Savings bank, $24.55; Mrs. C. R. Jacobs, $25; Dorothy Kander, Anna Margaret Koster, Margaret Craig, and Helen Kraus, $13; Anonymous and Goldenrod of Havenswood, each $16; W. H. W.; Saberty, and Mrs. Jorgensen, each $12.

Walter Davidson, manager of the central division, American Red Cross, reported the total contribution to the Japanese fund to have reached $1,478.200 in the ten states comprising the division.

AUTUMN MOVERS ON MOVE TODAY; RATES RAISED

Many a Chicago householder will be up bright and early this morning. It is the beginning of the fall moving season and during the next three days thousands of tenants will change their residences.

To add to the troubles of Mr. Householder this year the moving van companies have announced a boost in rates of almost 50 per cent.

Moving rates during the period from Sept. 27 to Oct. 2 will be raised from $5 to $7.50 an hour for a van and a horse and the mileage rate will be $1.50 instead of $1 as heretofore, it is announced.

Now They Are Stopping Race of Immigrant Ships

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Although eleven liners with about 16,000 immigrants aboard are now on the way to America in readiness for the opening of the October quota, there will be no race up the Narrows to cross the imaginary line at quarantine, as has occurred in other months, Commissioner Curran announced today. The commissioner said a plan had been worked out whereby the order of arrival at quarantine would be determined by the time the liners pass Ambrose channel lightship.

Moving rates during the period from Sept. 27 to Oct. 2 will be raised from $5 to $7.50 an hour for a van and a horse and the mileage rate will be $1.50 instead of $1 as heretofore, it is announced.

Again the Inquirer leads!

NEW YORK MARVELS AT INQUIRER

World's Greatest City Wakes Up to Find Philadelphia Enterprise Filling Newspaper Gap

New York Government

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—New Yorkers, expecting only a make-shift combination morning newspaper, awoke to find a new complete and amazingly satisfying paper, containing not only all the overseas and national news, but all the news of Greater New York, as well.

It was The Philadelphia Inquirer, in bold black legend on either side of the first page, fairly leading.

New York fairly jumped for master stroke in the journal.

Inquirers cast as the big white piles in subway and wall stations, on newsstands and in the arms of jubilant newspaper, they melted away like like ice cream at a Fourth of July picnic.

At home, housewives in the tall apartments of flats and the houses gathered them in, men and women jammed to downtown skyscrapers, train yards, and triple line of Inquirer readers, with other lines of non-purchasers, eagerly reading over the shoulders of the more fortunate ones.

Once in a while some one in the strong hands a copy of some other Philadelphia newspaper to find that it confined only the news ordinarily served to the Philadelphians.

The Inquirer was heralded by the clerks in the newsstands, by the newsboys containing "all the New York news," and the New

Wall Street Este Than Up

Down in the huge financial and wholesale districts the demand and newspaper for Inquirers began with the vanguard of arrivals and increased by many leaps until the stands were cleaned out at 4 a.m. on Sept. 19.

"I could have sold a thousand more," was the wall of Jim Gregory, who had one of the Park Place stands.

"Everybody came and saying 'I want Philadelphia's Inquirer' until my head ached."

The amazing rush for these papers in this district is a remarkable demonstration of the speed with which information travels. It seemed that all of a sudden, everybody in the cliff-like buildings knew that New York had been given a new complete newspaper overnight. Its only complete newspaper to get out everybody was turning to get the big hotel, club and retail shopping districts.

"I could have sold five hundred more," said the manager of the Inquirer's stand in the Hotel Pennsylvania.

"Everybody preferred it to the small

Philadelphia home editions of the other

Inquirers went like a jiffy."

"Everybody was amazed and delighted by the complete spread of

New York news. It was great."

New York City Edition

The special New York city edition of the Inquirer was the result of careful, thorough preparation by the news-and circulation departments of the newspaper. The greatest department in New York, the greatest newspaper and speeded up to the reading community on earth in addition to Philadelphia and the Inquirer's own great circulation.

Philadelphia's Inquirers were rushed here from Philadelphia on a train leaving

Broad Street Station at 1 a.m. and fifty minutes. A fleet of trucks was awaiting their arrival, speed with them quickly as needed, to all sections of Greater New York.

A Triumph of Story

To have created within a comparatively short time such a complete newspaper for the world's greatest city, was a tremendous achievement. To distribute that newspaper to New York from river to river, and from the Battery to Yonkers, and in Brooklyn, East Brooklyn and other nearby-paths, might have been an awakening that morning. It was another triumph of energy and determination. It took all New York marvelled at the fact that Philadelphia can plan and execute on the grand modern scale, concrete examples to every New Yorker of the resources and resourcefulness of The Philadelphia Inquirer.

A New York Edition of The Inquirer

How dependent a great city is upon newspapers is again revealed by the experience which New York has been passing through. The sudden and illegal strike of the pressmen virtually paralyzed every important daily. There were no editions on Tuesday morning. In the afternoon the evening journals combined in a miniature publication and the morning sheets of Wednesday followed the same policy. They did their best, and they did remarkably well considering the conditions which confronted them. But the news of the day, to which New Yorkers were accustomed, was lacking.

Here was an emergency which seemed to call for help. The Philadelphia Inquirer, with its vast resources, met it promptly. It turned up the telegraph wires with news from New York that could not be printed there. It was no small task to print in Philadelphia and deliver in New York all the important news of that big city, and give New Yorkers not a skeleton newspaper, but one that would have done credit to them and to their city, even had it been published regularly there.

"The Special New York City Edition" such was the title that The Inquirer turned out, left Philadelphia at 1:45 daylight-saving time on Wednesday morning. A special train consisting of five baggage cars made the run in two hours. Every arrangement for handling the scores of thousands of papers had been made. To every hotel they went. To every newsstand in Greater New York they went. It must have made New Yorkers open their eyes when they bought and found in their newspapers wireless telegrams to The Inquirer Office described as the only real newspaper on sale in that city, with the added information that it was in everybody's hands.

It was a fast, one to boast of, perhaps. But after all it was but an incident in the career of Philadelphia's and Pennsylvania's greatest newspaper.

"New York fairly jumped for this master stroke in Journalism." The Philadelphia Inquirer gave New Yorkers what the strike took from them—up to the minute New York news.

Yet, not a Philadelphia family was deprived of its own complete copy of The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Already acknowledged the leading Philadelphia newspaper, The Inquirer again demonstrated its progressiveness and its resourcefulness. Another chapter was written in the history of Journalism.

Again The Philadelphia Inquirer lived up to its reputation, gained after years and years of doing big things well—AND DOING THEM FIRST.

It is said Philadelphia is proud of her most progressive newspaper's latest triumph. New York is grateful. And naturally The Philadelphia Inquirer still further lengthens its commanding lead.

Years ago Philadelphia was a competitive newspaper city. But the consistent progressiveness of The Inquirer, its sincerity of purpose and its faithful daily delivery have brought about a natural result. Now it's The Inquirer—

First in Philadelphia

Influence—Progressiveness—Advertising

Hand in hand with fundamental progressiveness goes the CIRCULATION of a newspaper. That's why The Inquirer is the one big morning newspaper in the largest morning paper city.

Hand in hand with worth-while home circulation goes the INFLUENCE of a newspaper. That's why The Inquirer has the greatest reader influence in Philadelphia.

It is only natural that this progressiveness, circulation and influence should make The Philadelphia Inquirer carry more advertising (actual lineage and dollars) than any of its contemporaries.

The Inquirer offers greater advertising value than was thought possible of any medium. Through its unique carrier system by which each and every section of Greater Philadelphia is blanketed, The Philadelphia Inquirer GUARANTEES delivery into over 75% of the worth-while homes. And Philadelphia is known as "The City of Homes"—with a trading area covering a circle with a radius of 40 miles and including over 3,500,000 people.

The Inquirer representatives know the Philadelphia market. They have valuable data that should interest every manufacturer and distributor—and will be glad to call on you.

ALL OFF ON THAT ARMY-N. DAME CHICAGO GAME

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.
Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—(Special)—Secretary of War Weeks informed Senator McKinley of Illinois today that the administration at the military academy had decided not to accept the invitation of the city of Chicago to play the West Point-Notre Dame football game in that city next month.

The game, Senator McKinley was informed, originally scheduled for the Polo grounds, New York, would be played at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, and the only reason for rejecting the Chicago invitation is the fact that it would take the West Point cadets away from their studies for at least three days.

War department officials, it was made clear, have always refrained from interfering with the academy officials in the matter of athletics, but Secretary Weeks submitted to Gen. F. W. Gladden, superintendent of the military academy, a letter from Denver and other influential Chicago citizens for staging the big intercollegiate game there.

Today he learned that the academy authorities had arranged to have the game played in Brooklyn after the Polo grounds had been denied them, and that they would not alter their plans.

By playing the game in Brooklyn, it was explained, the West Point students would be away from the academy only one day.

NAVY GOES TO COAST

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 27.—The Navy football team will be permitted to make a trip to California to meet the inter-collegiate champions of the Pacific coast on New Year's day if it was officially announced today by Rear Admiral Henry B. Wilson, superintendent of the naval academy.

The announcement is by way of acceptance of an invitation from the Pasadena Tournament of Roses association extended a couple of weeks ago, and the decision of Admiral Wilson has the hearty approval of Secretary of the Navy Denby. The entire main squad of about thirty players will make the trip.

Give Up Xmas Vacations.

The muddy gridiron warriors have voluntarily sacrificed their Christmas vacation in order to bring about a contest between representative teams of the east and west coast. It will mean an absence of the players for two weeks, but in view of the fact that practically the entire period will be that of a four month vacation, it will not interfere with the scholastic routine of the naval institution.

With the formal acceptance of the invitation plans were launched immediately to perfect all necessary details for the transcontinental trip of the midshipmen.

Flight in Los Angeles.

Pasadena, Calif., Sept. 27.—The invitation to the Annapolis Naval Academy eleven to play at Pasadena next New Year's day was extended several months ago, according to Tournament of Roses officials in charge of the arrangements for the game.

It was extended to the naval academy authorities that the United States fleet will be in Los Angeles harbor, the first of the year, and that the officers and men would welcome the opportunity of seeing the midshipmen in action.

CARDINALS UP AGAINST TEAM OF STARS SUNDAY

Three famous gridiron captains who shone last season on leading universities of the country will appear in the battle front of the Buffalo All-American game with the machine gun Cardinals at the Polo grounds on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. They are Glenn Carpenter, Max Gullian, and Frank Culver.

Culver piloted the 1922 Notre Dame machine. Culver captained Syracuse in 1922. Gullian was leader of the 1922 Brown university eleven. Several other equally prominent players will appear in the All-American lineup, including Kelly, Dunn, Hart, Little, Urban, McNamee, Pete Smith, Harry Conover, and Frank Moroney.

The Cardinals, anticipating a stormy matinee, have been working overtime in their daily practice and are banking on a victory via the aerial route. Tickets are on sale at Spalding's, Wilson's, and at Pete's place, 55th street and Broadway.

W. ARROWS PLAY E. CHICAGO.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 27.—The East Chicago Doves will open their 1923 season at the East Chicago athletic field against the Chicago West Arrows on Sunday, Sept. 30, at 4:30 p. m. in a weight division of the Midwest League this evening.

Yale Men Read and Weep, Then Read Hugh's Last Line

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 27.—(Special)—Men of Yale, read this and weep.

Instead of this being the Yale year for the old gridiron, the year of the return of the old gridiron, the start of a season that this year does Jones drilled football into them clear to Christmas, indoors, and in the ten days' work the team has shown that it is less promising than either last year or the year before.

Instead of chasing Tad or trying to help him with fatuous advice, you may win for him if you can work out just one problem. The problem is how to make a 166 pound tackle equal a 200 pound and plus a 190 pound back.

That, briefly, is the Yale problem.

With the best coaching, most skillful, best fighting teams and one of the smartest that Yale has had since the days when it fell into the doldrums of football with what the old Yale men call veterans material—the fact is that the outlook which seems so bright in the alumni weekly and sounds so fine at a class reunion is worse than dubious.

Look the Foundation.

Yale lacks weight, lacks material. For heaven's sake don't blame Tad Jones or the coaching squad. The team has brains, spirit, and it knows football. It has the size, the number of plays, a lot of speed, the work of the coaches is to develop those—and they have done so. But how can a good 176 pound man smash through a line averaging 194?

Yale have been cheering and declaring that at last old Eli is a man of veteran material. This is because the team has size, speed, and the squad are known. They do not know that the names are familiar simply because Jones has used many players who may land somewhere else in the line if he develops.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 27.—(Special)—Yale lacks weight, lacks material. For heaven's sake don't blame Tad Jones or the coaching squad. The team has brains, spirit, and it knows football. It has the size, the number of plays, a lot of speed, the work of the coaches is to develop those—and they have done so. But how can a good 176 pound man smash through a line averaging 194?

Yale have been cheering and declaring that at last old Eli is a man of veteran material. This is because the team has size, speed, and the squad are known. They do not know that the names are familiar simply because Jones has used many players who may land somewhere else in the line if he develops.

MORGAN PARK PREPS PLAY ST. RITA TODAY

BY WALLACE ABBEY.

Morgan Park High school eleven, which was rolled under, 32 to 6, by Emerson High of Gary in its initial struggle last Saturday, will today bump up against another tough customer when it meets St. Rita, with De La Salle joint holder of the Catholic league title, in a pre-season engagement on the Morgan Park field. The festivities are set for 2:15 o'clock.

Although not considered serious contenders for the "B" division championship, Coach Davenport's eleven includes three regulars from last year's team and four ends. It is picked from the largest squad as the largest.

To look at the optimistic side: Center will be good; Lovejoy is a coker, fast, strong, a good ranger; Landis is a fighting fullback, a stout and blunt, while weighing only 176, is a great player who may land somewhere else in the line if he develops.

St. Rita Team Strong.

St. Rita claims to have lost none of its power while put to the front the last year. Coach T. J. St. John, who has been doing his squad intensively for weeks and is confident the outcome will be satisfactory. The eleven entered the league race Oct. 4, meeting De Paul academy, and it is toward this affair that the coach is looking.

Many other coaches yesterday put on the finishing touches for their games tomorrow, especially in the Suburban and Catholic leagues, where victory means credit in the direction of the league.

Landis and Lavelle Academy will practice daily to keep the relationship of the novices in their battles on Loyola field, as Chuck McCullough's charges already have eliminated Seniors.

Play Out of Town Team.

Four of the city's best prep outfitts will venture out of town in quest of victory. Lincoln, with 176 pounds, is the best and a good one. It is back weighing 196 and showing a lot of good.

The ends are veterans—Lundin and Hulman—with Blair, 185 pounds, to land either at end or tackle. Out of the squad of eight men Jones could select only thirty-two of possible variety caliber, with at least nine desirable men, and of those three are regulars.

The line of weight is played with a 190 pounder, to an one coming direct from Harvard, Vera, and the lightness of the team is appealing. Maloney, O'Hearn, Neale, Neidlinger, Richeson, Stevens, and Bench all are 176 pounds or under. Pond, a very promising candidate, and Haas weigh around 180.

The Lady of Pentlands

By ELIZABETH JORDAN.

SYNOPSIS.
Valerie Knight has spent the greater part of her life globe-trotting with her father, the mother died when she was a child, and she and her father have made only occasional visits to New York. On their last visit Joseph Knight dies suddenly. Just before his death he confides to Valerie he is dying without leaving her a cent.
An old school friend of Valerie's (Anne Sterling) comes to the rescue, pays all Valerie's bills, and takes the girl into her home. After the first sharp pains of her father's death have worn away, Valerie finds out the treasure she owns, a string of pearls, and repays Anne. She tells Anne she must leave home and go to earn her own living. Anne bids her stay on. In the midst of their difficulties, George Gordon, an old friend of Valerie's, comes to call and invites Valerie and Gordon to spend the weekend at his home—Pentlands. He offers Valerie a position there. He is a widower with two sons, Gordon leaves. Anne tells Valerie he promised his wife on her deathbed he would never marry again. Anne also intimates there is something mysterious about Pentlands, but Valerie doesn't know what it is.
The Sterlings and Valerie arrive at Pentlands with Gordon.

INSTALLMENT XI.

VALERIE EXPERIENCES A SENSE OF UNEASINESS.

"You climbed the Evans once, didn't you?" Gordon asked Valerie.
She glanced at Perry. Was there any episode in her life which he had heard of? She could not remember having mentioned her mountaineering experiences to Anne, but of course she might have made some passing reference to them. B. G. caught and understood the glance.
"I read about the climb in the newspapers, at the time," he explained.
"You know it was much written up. You were the only woman who ever did it."
"That was four years ago. Half a dozen women have done it since. It was only a climb I did then." Valerie hastened to admit. "One of my friends dropped off before me, at the worst spot on the saddle, and now where it had gone on. That's what I meant, "she smiled, "rather upset me. One doesn't have to enjoy the view at just that point. My nerves promptly joined my muscles. I couldn't go forward and I wouldn't go back, and there were good reasons why I couldn't stay where I was. My guides were worried. They were fine guides, and they'd checked with me a great deal, but I knew they longed to toss me into the abyss then and there, and I didn't blame them. Of course, by weakening I was putting their lives in danger as well as my own."

She stopped. She had met for a moment the birdlike eyes of old Mrs. Chapin, but now they held a slight film, as of fatigue, and a white head was dropping toward her shoulder.

"Aunt Hadassah goes to sleep every night at dinner," B. G. explained in an undertone, "and usually at the most interesting point of some one's talk. Please go on."

Aunt Hadassah, hearing her name, but not the rest of the sentence, straightened up suddenly, opened her black eyes wide, and stared at her nephew, like a sleepless child determined to keep awake.

"There isn't much in me," Valerie went on. "We were on a narrow ledge of ice, with a five foot crevice between us, and the next tags of our rope were a few short feet of hopelessly abyss below us. With a strong heart and a good guide, we could have been safe enough if all three kept it steady. But the guides got ready to swing me over, and started at her nephew, like a sleepless child determined to keep awake.

With a strong heart and a good guide, we could have been safe enough if all three kept it steady. But the guides got ready to swing me over, and started at her nephew, like a sleepless child determined to keep awake.

"I remember," Valerie said. "There were the most thrilling pictures of us in our Sunday newspapers."

"Inspired by the lively imagination of the artists," Valerie laughed. "I hope they showed a husky guide bracing the rope on each side. I couldn't have fallen unless I let go."

"Or unless a guide slipped, or the ice cut the rope, or you had an attack of vertigo, or some titch of that sort," Gordon commented.

"It was my last ascent," Valerie added, to the chagrin of the subject. "After that my father wouldn't let me climb any more. He said it was absurd to take risks when there was nothing to be gained by them—and of course he was right."

"There's a big thrill to be gained by them," Perry contributed, as an experienced mountain climber.

"The best part of it, I suppose, is the afterward," Valerie suggested.

"I know about the one I'm on," she insisted, meeting his eyes. Then she bit her lip. She hated to say so much of things. It sounded like a bid for sympathy. She tried to catch herself more carefully.

B. G. had made no comment on her theory, and now Perry, who was usually without tact, also dropped the subject. Unfortunately, when Perry dropped a subject every one around him heard it fall. A momentary silence settled over the diners. B. G. glanced at Anne.

"We'll have our coffee in the library," he said, and rose to lead the way back through the living hall.

If he had planned his cumulative effect he had done so wisely. Valerie, whose natural love of beauty was developed into a sixth sense by the life she had led, found her need satisfied here. She prided herself, alone with those tapestries. The bindings on the books she had on the table. There were thousands of books, well-worn, well-thumbed, well-thrown, here the light shone, as if one had the habit of sitting on them to read. There were also several uninteresting sliding top ladders on which explorers could mount and climb. Near the fireplace stood a concert grand piano, toward which Perry threw out a plump hand in an accustomed gesture.

"Play something, old man," he comfortably suggested, evidently following an established routine.

McTavish was pouring the coffee, but Gordon strolled toward the piano without waiting for his cup to be filled. As he sat down, however, he took out his cigarette case and selected and lit a cigarette before he began to play. To Valerie's disappointment, his playing was not unusual. She had known he played at all. As he did, she desired him to do it really well. Miss Knight's attitude toward amateurs was rather like that of the old man. However, Gordon's playing would not be considered bad. It might even have been good at one time. She would be glad to practice much. His program, too, was plainly adapted to Perry. Indeed, Perry kept calling to him for new favorites almost before he had finished the old ones.

"Now let's have the Banjo song," he demanded, when they had listened. Valerie reflected, to everything but jazz and ragtime. The next moment she settled back contentedly. B. G.'s singing was a vast improvement on B. G.'s playing. His voice was a good baritone and he used it admirably.

"I play de banjo better now," he said. "Dan him de tambourine do. Banjo, piano, for all the world. Ap! I jes plays for you."

Valerie knew the song well. For years it had been a favorite with her father. He had indulged a habit of softly whistling or humming it when he was dressing or when he sat at his desk glancing over his mail. There were tears in her eyes when it ended. She hardly heard the song that followed it. She did not wish to hear them. She was back in the past, living over with him the life she had loved.

During an interval she rose and said good night. They would understand. She was sure. Gordon accompanied her to the foot of the stairs and then, reluctantly, returned to the piano, for when she reached her rooms she heard, over the distance, a faint, distant echo of music. She glanced at her watch. It was after ten o'clock. She changed her evening gown for a negligee, put another log on the fire, and settled down before it for half an hour of meditation. But the sense of relaxation she had expected did not come. She felt nervous and oddly ill at ease—so much so, indeed, that she finally rose and walked restlessly around the room, trying to divert her mind by picking up and examining various bits of china.

To her annoyance, the sense of uneasiness deepened. Through the open door that led to the inner room she could see her bed, its pillows, flat round from its upper sheet neatly folded back. Abruptly she decided to yield to her mother's invitation. She must be tired. Fatigue and the memories evoked by the Banjo song would explain her present mood. Yet, she would go to bed. She could think there as well as anywhere. She was afraid she would think she was wherever she was. However, in that case, she could read. She selected a book from the shelves, with which one end of the room was lined, laid it in front of her on the small table at the head of her bed, and made her preparations for the night. The companion found her still in a mood that could only be described as listless. She longed for darkness. Ignoring the waiting volume, she turned off the lights and slipped into bed.

ACTING: Good.

PHOTOGRAPHY: Ditto.

STORY: The tale has to do with a young pair who marry on the installment plan against the wishes of their parents who would have them wed wealthy and otherwise. The bride's mother has, for a long time, had a goody cake-eater in mind for her daughter—said cake-eater being a mind of her own, has mother, but in this respect her daughter takes after her. Which accounts for the secret marriage with young Mr. Waddington.

The happy pair, after a most unhappy siege of apartment hunting, take a culling place in the country—so much down and the rent like rent. (You know.) They buy a lot of furniture, mostly down, and don't pay the first installment on the so-called out. Being an optimistic pair, however, it never occurs to them that the beaming gentlemen who so warmly welcome them into the fold can turn into roaring lions.

WEIRD, just about everything happens that COULD happen—and all at the wrong time—of COURSE. Equally, of course, a guardian angel gets on the job and has him marry the girl.

REMARKS: "Modern Matrimony" is a nice, merry little program picture that will serve admirably to pass away a dull hour, for, yes, it has no objection but to do just that little thing. See you tomorrow!

MEN'S FASHIONS

BY A. T. GALLICO.

Paisley Designs Liner.
NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence)—A metropolitan shop which always has some attractive combination in the window scored recently, in our estimation, with the following: It used light gray flannel shirts as a foundation for bandanna ties of Paisley design, one with red as the bordering color and the other French blue. The color effect was striking, but far from loud. There are some ways of combining the brightest colors so that the effect is quiet enough for the most particular. And as cheerful a thing as color should not be avoided.

We were at the Davis cup matches a few weeks back, looking over the great part of the audience as well as the tennis champions of two continents. A great many dark blue suits were in evidence, as is always the case, season after season, wherever there is a group of men. The well-dressed man will never give up his blue suits and the one who takes them off is not becoming a color to all men that the temptation to wear it is stronger than the desire for novelty. Here are a few of the things that were done to blue suits out at Forest Hills that day: One had a pin stripe of light blue. With it was worn a light blue shirt, with narrow white stripes widely set apart, and a four in hand or slightly darker blue, white diagonal stripes. Another man had gray felt hat, carmine red dark blue hand finished of this well-chosen outfit.

Another similar combination consisted of a dark blue suit with white stripe, blue and white striped shirt, and a dark blue bow tie with a small white figure. Still another plain dark blue suit was combined with a purple four in hand, a white Oxford shirt, and a purple handkerchief.

WHY DO YOU ALWAYS AVOID US?

YES! WE THANK YOU FOR BEING MEAN! PLEASE COME!

WE DO WISH YOU'D COME UP THY HOUSE AGAIN AND MAKE US SOME OF THAT FRIGHTFUL FUDGE!

AH!

Yesterday's hog market was flooded with undesirable lightweights and poor to fair packing-grades, while good to choice kinds were comparatively scarce. Better offerings met with a good call at steady to strong prices, while other kinds ruled weak to lower. The 140@160 lbs. steers especially, though steady in quality and weight, were practically without bids. The Armour houses purchased indifferently. Late shipping orders forced best 235 lb butchers to $3.35. General average price for the day, 37.70, against $3.25 a week ago, and a year ago.

This week's receipts of cattle will total close to 30,000, for the largest of the years. Over a third of the number were western ranchers, which worked against the general market for all excepting best corn fed natives. Yesterday's trade was slow from start to finish, with values weak to unevenly lower. Most of the common to fair good natives, including butcher stock, show 50@70c. Steers dropped last week, with best 235 lbs about 25@26c off from a week ago. Veal and calving steers ruled weak at lowest prices of the week. No fat steers sold above $3.10.

Fat Lambs Decline.

While country demand held feeding lambs on a firm basis, killing stock slumped 24@26c, to the lowest point in over three weeks. Barring a few "out of line" sales, at $13.60@15.75 early, to city butchers, practical top natives stopped at $18.000 and westerns at $15.25, while feeders sold largely at $15.60@15.75, the latter being 25c off from the $15.75 mark. Aged sheep were scarce and sold weak to a shade lower; for slaughtering, although all feeding and breeding sheep met ready outlet to the country at firm prices. Feeding yearlings without reached $10.75, with aged stock at $10.00.

Calves, 100 lbs. average, for today are estimated to cost $10.00, based on 12,000 sheep, against $10.75 cattle, $10.25 hogs, and $10.00 against the corresponding Friday a year ago.

H.J. PATTEN CAN'T SEE RUSSIA AS GRAIN EXPORTER

Henry J. Patten of Brandon, brother of James A. Patten, returned to Chicago yesterday having been abroad for the last thirteen months. He traveled extensively in Russia with his nephew, Jack Patten, and made investigations as to crops and transportation conditions. The latter, he says, are demoralized while crops are larger.

"The soviet officials are anxious to secure foreign financial credits and realize that about the only way that they can secure them is by increasing exports from Russia," he said. "Undoubtedly Russia has larger grain crops this year than for the last few years, but I do not think any one can give any definite figures as to the exact size of their

"In going from Riga to Moscow I traveled for sixteen hours by daylight through Russia and during this whole time met but one freight train. In returning also from Moscow to Warsaw I traveled again for sixteen hours by daylight through Russia and again met but one freight train."

"From my talk with newspaper correspondents who had spent the last two years in Russia, I am also convinced that Russia is a land of contrasts, as is described both by rail and by water that I do not know how Russia can export any large amount of grain this coming winter."

2,164,000 Bushels Wheat Cleared at Fort William

Fort William, Ont., Sept. 27.—Fifteen vessels cleared from here today, carrying the biggest tonnage of grain of the season. There went out of the port 2,164,000 bushels of wheat, 35,000 bu. of oats, and 130,000 bu. of barley. The grain carriers were two of the little Scandinavian ocean boats which are plying on the upper lakes for the season.

Grain men here deny reports that there is any lack of tonnage for charter.

GRAINS REACT AT CLOSE FROM EARLY UP TURN

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain markets have been on the up-grade for over a week with an advance of 2% to 5% on wheat, 5% to 8% on corn, and 2% to 3% on oats from the recent low, which many thought sufficient for the time being, and while early there was a strong upturn with corn and oats in new ground for the season the close was on a good reaction. Wheat finished 2% to 4% lower, corn 1% to 1.5% higher, oats 2% to 4% higher, and rye 1% lower.

Wheat showed a heavy under-ton, throughout, due to the loss of 1/2 of its strength from corn. Offerings increased on all the bulges and small trades were about the bottom, with September 1.45%; December, 1.04%; and May, 1.104/10.10. Advance to the high point of the day was on spreading operations purchases being made here against sales at Winnipeg. Later market showed strength and closed unchanged to 4% lower, with cash prices fractionally higher, No. 1 northern being 1c over October.

Wheat News is Bearish. With Washington's new saying there was a real probability of an increase in the import duty on wheat, the general application for an increase of 50 per cent by the Farm Bureau attracted little attention.

Weather conditions in the southwest were favorable for the new crop, and messages from there indicated that would be no reduction of consequence in the acreage in parts of Kansas. Export demand was slow with sales of 100,000 bu. and corn high price. It is deemed as improbable that the United States will get any of the Greek order for 15,000,000 bu. Wet weather has slowed up the movement in the Canadian northwest. Farmers delivered 3,857,000 bu. Wednesday at country points in the three provinces, against 5,415,000 bu. last year.

September Corn Congested.

Open interest in September corn is being rapidly reduced. The price advanced to 5% to 6% on continued short covering, while longs sold on resting orders and the finish was at the top. Cash grain has been fractionally higher, with corn high for the season at 8.45c for No. 2 yellow. Profit taking was largely responsible for the recession of 4.64c from the top on the deferred futures, and December went to 4c under May at the last, after being 4c premium early. Further claims of damage from the recent frost were received from Iowa, where a small demand for feeding corn is noted. Countings of cornings of oats are small, although at one time during the day around 8c per bu. could have been paid at loading stations in parts of Illinois for No. 4.

September Rye in Ozark.

Outside interest in oats is increasing. Hartnett-Fraser Co. was out with an other bullish statement, calling attention to the increased use on farms for feed. All recessions brought in good buying and the finish was firm.

Trade in rye was light and prices held up with little influence. Export demand remained slow.

G.O.P. DIVISION GIVES INDIANA A NEW PROBLEM

Debts, Factions, and Klan New Issues.

Y ARTHUR SEARS HENNING. Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 25.—(Spec.)—For more than the usual number of reasons, Indiana, according to present indications, is likely to be an exceedingly doubtful state in the presidential election next year.

To add to the normal political complexion in Hoosierdom, the Republicans have involved themselves in a bit of factional warfare, the end of which no man can divine. Then a new cause for division in Republican ranks has been contributed by Gov. Warren T. McCray's financial difficulties and the question whether the Republican governor's misfortunes in acts will discredit the party next year when a governor is to be elected in contrast with this and state of affairs in the Republican party are the comparative harmony and confidence of the Democratic party.

Klan Worries Both Sides. An element of uncertainty for both parties, however, is the Ku Klux Klan, up to number between 300,000 and 400,000 voters in this state. The Klan nominated several candidates in the 1922 election, since which time it has been stronger. It dominates affairs in a large part of rural Indiana.

The immediate problem of the Republicans is what to do about Gov. McCray. These elements of the party presented by Postmaster General Harry New, National Committeeman of the party and State Chairman, Walbridge, the party ought to consider calling on Gov. McCray to resign and thereby relieve the party of responsibility. To that end these leaders called a meeting of the state committee to be called for next Monday.

Claim Debts Personal Affairs. This move is called factional politics by the Republicans still faithful to the McCray-Watson combination, who echo the assertion of Gov. McCray that his financial difficulties are his personal affair and do not involve his party as a public servant. Senator Watson, Chairman Walbridge and Committeeman Keeling have been this week holding conferences in various parts of the state to sound opinion on McCray. They have enjoyed a good deal of sympathy for the governor, particularly among the men, who have a still feeling for him who has lost his fortune in agricultural ventures. This sympathy will be reflected at the state committee meeting, possibly to an extent that will defeat the move to demand the governor's resignation.

Right for Convention Delegates. The long standing Republican strife is evolving into a three-cornered struggle for control of the Indiana delegation to the national convention. Postmaster General New has espoused the cause of President Coolidge and his followers will endeavor to meet the election of delegates to vote for Coolidge till the cows come home. Senator Watson is also for the nomination of President Coolidge, but without reservations. Mr. Watson was supposed to go into the last ditch with Coolidge.

Mr. Watson has some presidential ambitions himself and if it should appear that Mr. Coolidge could not be nominated, the Indiana delegation, Mr. Watson hopes, would rise and demand that the matter be referred to Senator New for President. Then a Watson-Coolidge would be in order. Mr. Watson would have none but Watson supporters in that delegation and Mr. New would demand they shall not be Watson supporters.

Beveridge Still in Fight. Then there is former Senator Beveridge, who demonstrated his hold on the Indiana Republicans by defeating Postmaster General New for renomination in 1922. He is reported to be a receptive candidate for the presidency, despite his support of the election by Mr. Watson. At any rate, the Beveridge partisans will endeavor to elect delegates who will support Mr. Beveridge and against Mr. Watson.

Then Senator Johnson (Calif.) will enter the primary contest and he will further enlivened. Johnson is close to carrying the state in the Beveridge Republicans, said it was New from the senate. The Republicans, reinforced, will said, Johnson, defeat Beveridge. Now Beveridge and New followers are drawing their knives for Watson.

Evanston tied Hyde Park, the city champion, last week, and this week's game will give a line on Senn's strength. (Story on page eighteen.)
